This list is made for a correct comprehension of Marxism and its development in being an opposition to global capitalism, neo colonialism, the distorters, social reformers, all imperialists, and existing revisionist party states. Against all forms of reactionaries.

"The emancipation of the working classes must be conquered by the working classes themselves; the struggle for the emancipation of the working classes means not a struggle for class privileges, but for equal rights and duties, and the abolition of all class rule." - Karl Marx

- 1) Capitalist production is the first to make the commodity the universal form of all products.
- 2) COMMODITY PRODUCTION NECESSARILY LEADS TO CAPITALIST PRODUCTION, once the worker has ceased to be a part of the conditions of production (slavery, serfdom) or the naturally evolved community no longer remains the basis [of production] (India). From the moment at which labour power itself in general becomes a commodity.
- 3) CAPITALIST PRODUCTION ANNIHILATES THE [ORIGINAL] BASIS OF COMMODITY PRODUCTION, isolated, independent production and exchange between the owners of commodities, or the exchange of equivalents.”

socialism is classless every respect, economically, morally, and intellectually, still stamped with the birthmarks of the old society from whose womb it emerges. Accordingly, the individual producer receives back from society – after the deductions have been made – exactly what he gives to it. What he has given to it is his individual quantum of labor. For example, the social working day consists of the sum of the individual hours of work; the individual labor time of the individual producer is the part of the social working day contributed by him, his share in it. He receives a certificate from society that he has furnished such-and-such an amount of labor (after deducting his labor for the common funds); and with this certificate, he draws from the social stock of means of consumption as much as the same amount of labor cost. The same amount of labor which he has given to society in one form, he receives back in another.

Here, obviously, the same principle prevails as that which regulates the exchange of commodities, as far as this is exchange of equal values. Content and form are changed, because under the altered circumstances no one can give anything except his labor, and because, on the other hand, nothing can pass to the ownership of individuals, except individual means of consumption. But as far as the distribution of the latter among the individual producers is concerned, the same principle prevails as in the exchange of commodity equivalents: a given amount of labor in one form is exchanged for an equal amount of labor in another form.

Hence, equal right here is still in principle – bourgeois right, although principle and practice are no longer at loggerheads, while the exchange of equivalents in commodity exchange exists only on the average and not in the individual case.

In spite of this advance, this equal right is still constantly stigmatized by a bourgeois limitation. The right of the producers is proportional to the labor they supply; the equality consists in the fact that measurement is made with an equal standard, labor.

But one man is superior to another physically, or mentally, and supplies more labor in the same time, or can labor for a longer time; and labor, to serve as a measure, must be defined by its duration or intensity, otherwise it ceases to be a standard of measurement. This equal right is an unequal right for unequal labor. It recognizes no class differences, because everyone is only a worker like everyone else; but it tacitly recognizes unequal individual endowment, and thus productive capacity, as a natural privilege. It is, therefore, a right of inequality, in its content, like every right. Right, by its very nature, can consist only in the application of an equal standard; but unequal individuals (and they would not be different individuals if they were not unequal) are measurable only by an equal standard insofar as they are brought under an equal point of view, are taken from one definite side only – for instance, in the present case, are regarded only as workers and nothing more is seen in them, everything else being ignored. Further, one worker is married, another is not; one has more children than another, and so on and so forth. Thus, with an equal performance of labor, and hence an equal in the social consumption fund, one will in fact receive more than another, one will be richer than another, and so on. To avoid all these defects, right, instead of being equal, would have to be unequal.

But these defects are inevitable in the first phase of communist society as it is when it has just emerged after prolonged birth pangs from capitalist society. Right can never be higher than the economic structure of society and its cultural development conditioned thereby.

Engels in his later life continued to defend what he saw as Marx's thought. Here we see differences in the way that Engels and Marx approached questions of philosophy, political economy, and socialism. Read these writings critically, in light of the fact that Marx and Engels were two separate people. In particular, Engels:

Had a positivist, natural-law interpretation of dialectics and science. (Marx had a critical, negative conception of dialectics and science, and never thought that dialectics were laws of nature.)

Conceived of Marx's critique of political economy as a mere improvement of bourgeois political economy; a related error was not putting enough of an emphasis on Marx's analysis of the fetishism of commodities. (Marx saw his critique of political economy as a radical break with the entire field of political economy as a whole. The fetishism of commodities was thus an important and central concept for Marx's critique, and this one concept ties together much of Marx's works into an integrated whole.)

Promoted the "logical-historical" interpretation of Chapters 1-3 of Capital Vol. I, seeing those three chapters as referring to a supposedly historically existent mode of production called "simple commodity production". (Marx never speaks of the existence of "simple commodity production" as a distinct mode of production. For Marx, the first three chapters are just an theoretical abstraction of the capitalist mode of production, starting from the basic unit of capitalism, the commodity-form.)

Saw "scientific" socialism to some extent as a positivist, empiricist doctrine. (Marx saw his socialism as "scientific" only in opposition to "Utopian" socialism.)

Lenin

by John Keracher

Published in The Proletarian [Chicago], vol. 7, no. 2 (February 1924), pp. 8.

Nicolai Lenin was one of those great characters that historic conditions raised up. He was the greatest product of the Proletarian World Movement since Marx.

Just as Karl Marx was the greatest theoretician and philosopher of Proletarian Revolution, so Lenin was the greatest tactician of the actual living class struggle — the man of action.

His writings show beyond a doubt that as an interpreter of Marx and as an interpreter of social phenomena he stood out clearly ahead of all other Marxian thinkers. His scathing and unmerciful criticism of social patriotism and the leaders of the Second International portrayed him as the uncompromising opponent, not only of the capitalist order and its open defenders but all "socialist" apologizers and halfhearted defenders of the same.

Marxism with Lenin was not a dry formula. It was the intellectual equipment for the strategy of class warfare. Those who have taken the trouble to STUDY Lenin's writings have it forcibly thrust home to them that he did not view the Revolution as a pitched battle, to be won or lost according to a prearranged plan, but as mor or less protracted warfare in which defeats and victories, advances and retreats (militaristic and economic) were inevitable parts to be dealt with from the standpoint of actual existing conditions. He did not conceive of an abstract defense of the revolution. Fine phrases about liberty, justice, freedom of speech, and democracy were not his weapons. He knew that the Proletarian Revolution could only be defended by the armed Proletarian themselves — by a Red Army.

All things he viewed from a class standpoint. He realized that there were two concepts of Democracy — Bourgeois Democracy and Proletarian Democracy. The former he fought and the latter he upheld.

Lenin's greatest work, which has left its stamp on the world movement, was his laying bare of the true character of the State.

Bourgeois writers say, "Lenin overthrew the Tsar," "Lenin invented the Soviet State," etc. What he actually did was to direct the Proletarian Revolution and function through the new state form that made its appearance, the historic function of which none understood as well as he.

A tireless fighter, an unyielding adherent to fundamental Marxian principles, a relentless enemy of World Imperialism, and a champion of all the down-trodden and exploited, Lenin is mourned by hundreds of millions of the world's workers. It is questionable if any other man that ever lived made such a deep impress in world affairs, raised so much hatred from the money lords of Capitalism, and so much enthusiasm and hope in the breasts of the workers of all lands.

The death of Lenin is an immeasurable loss to the Russian Revolution and to the international movement of the working class. His passing should not be so much a cause for grief as his life and work should prove an example and source of inspiration to every true revolutionist.

Vladimir Ilich Ulianov (Nicolai Lenin) is not dead. He will live forever in the memory of the world's toiling millions.

On Trotsky:

Trotsky was to the right of Lenin. In particular, 1) Trotsky had a much more instrumentalist conception of the relation between State and class, 2) Permanent Revolution is rly an intermediary between Menshevism and Bolshevism. PermRev legates tasks of the bourgeois rev to the socialist rev. It appears at first more radical than Lenin's line of demdic to complete the bourgeois rev, but its consequence in practice is pulling the “socialist” rev to the fulfilment of bourgeois tasks.. blurring of the separation between the two phases actually keeps the proletarian rev in bourgeois programmatic terrain, or has to assume there is no contradiction between bourgeois and proletarian rev tasks.

Different conceptions of imperialism:

- 1) Imperialism as finance/monopoly capital (Lenin, Bukharin, Hilferding)
- 2) Imperialism as metabolism with pre-capitalism (Luxemburg)
- 3) Imperialism as relationship of unequal exchange/value transfer from periphery to core (I've only read John Smith on this)
- 4) Imperialism as policy of a specific reactionary faction of capital (Kautsky)
